Workshop

Understanding Our Cultural Biases

With

Deborah Harrison
Diversity Coordinator
Fleming College

Deborah Harrison is a local human rights educator with a background in immigrant settlement and race relations work in both Toronto and Montreal, but her cultural roots are here in rural southern Ontario. Debbie has raised biracial children and her life experience is intimately bound up in the histories of many different cultures. She is the Diversity Coordinator at Fleming College, where she uses her experience to promote cross-cultural understanding and non-violent communication, as well as advising over 500 international students from over 20 countries each year.
